Question: I don't know how much space I need what can you suggest?

ANSWER: Here is an idea of what you can usually store in each size.

5X10 - Small one bedroom apartment

10X10 - Average two bedroom apartment

10X15 - Two bedroom house/ 3 bedroom apartment

10X20 - Small 3 bedroom house

please note that these average sizes are a guideline for storage needs and depend on the size of furniture, amount of boxes as well as packing quality
You can also store up to 10 feet high in each storage unit, so think about what you can stack, take apart and pack tight to ensure the best use of space.

Question: Are all climate controlled storage facilities the same?

ANSWER: While many facilities advertise as having climate control, many only control the temperature of the air, either by heating or cooling the air in the building. At 1-CALL STORAGE, in addition to maintaining air temperature between 50 and 80 Degrees Farenheight, the humidity level is also constantly monitored and maintained below 55 degrees Relative Humidity, to deter mold and mildew growth. Only when all three elements are monitored and maintained is the unit really climate controlled.

Question: What should typically be placed in climate controlled storage?

ANSWER: Products that can be adversely affected by being exposed to extremes in heat, cold and humidity should be stored in a controlled environment. Items such as pharmaceuticals, cloth, wood and leather furniture, electronic equipment and appliances, musical instruments, fine artwork, books, medical and legal records are among the most frequently stored items.

Question: Why store in non-climate standard units?

ANSWER: A non-climate controlled space is similar to a basement, garage, shed or attic. If the items planned to be stored are usually kept in these areas without a problem, it should be acceptable. At 1-CALL STORAGE, the metal construction of our units, together with a pitched roof, gutters, downspouts and ceilings with air ventilation, provide a superior storage environment for these items.
